

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

BRILLIANT PIANIST RETURNS TO PORT ROYAL
BY LILA MEEKS

Amazing but absolutely true: USCB Chamber Music's 46th Season is sold out. So if you would like a chance to hear the incredible Andrew Armstrong, this is your best chance. He will give a FREE concert at St. Mark's Thursday, October 2 at 5:30. Praised by critics for his passionate expression and dazzling technique, Mr. Armstrong has delighted lowcountry audiences for the last four seasons as the Artistic Director and resident pianist for USCB Chamber Music.

There is no telling what pieces the hour-long program will include, but if his past performances are indicative, they will be played beautifully with great energy by Andy and enjoyed enthusiastically with great appreciation by the audience. This October Andy will introduce us to St. Mark's brand-new Steinway grand. You should arrive early because the seating is limited and his fans are many.

Following his St. Marks appearance, he and a number of his Beaufort fans are heading to Tuscany for a week's series of concerts where he will be joined by many of the international musicians who, over the last twenty years, have become Beaufort favorites. Then on Sunday November 9 Andy will return to Beaufort to open the Series' season of five remarkable Sunday concerts and an uncharted, amazing Youth Concert on Saturday, February 28.

Mark your calendar now for St Mark's so you won't miss this rare opportunity to hear the music of the masters played by one of the world's great artists for FREE. For information about the entire upcoming season, go to www.uscbchambermusic.com.
